

SOCIAL entrepreneurship

BUSINESS
PIONEER

+

CHRISTIAN
PERSPECTIVE

+

SOCIAL MISSION

=

IMPACT FOR THE KINGDOM OF GOD

LESSON 5

Unit Learning Outcomes

- A. Discuss social entrepreneurship
- B. Explain Intrapreneurship

Metalanguage

1. Social Enterprise Models. These refers to the various ways that a social enterprise is operating in order to “make a difference” in the communities they serve.

A social enterprise in the Philippines is a business that aims to achieve both financial and social or environmental goals.

Social enterprises in the Philippines address societal needs like: poverty alleviation, healthcare provision, education, environmental conservation, and community development

The Concept of Social Entrepreneurship

Social entrepreneurship covers a broad range of activities.

- This included individuals who are determined to make a difference, ventures with social purpose in adding for-profit motivations among those in the nonprofit sector, philanthropists supporting organizations that promotes various social purposes and nonprofit organizations that are incorporating entrepreneurial concepts in their undertakings.
- Moreover, the most common definition of social entrepreneurs was presented by Dees (1998, revised 2001). According to him, “social entrepreneurs play the role of change agents in the social sector, by:
 - adopting a mission to create and sustain social value (not just private value),
 - recognizing and relentlessly pursuing new opportunities to serve that mission,
 - engaging in a process of continuous innovation, adaptation, and learning,
 - acting boldly without being limited by resources currently in hand, and exhibiting a heightened sense of accountability to the constituencies served and for the outcomes created”.

“Ramon Ang, the controlling shareholder of San Miguel Corp. and a self-made billionaire, this year pledged P500 million ($9 million) to build schools for underprivileged children in Manila,” Forbes

Gian Lopez

Manny Pacquiao

Lucio Tan

Henry Sy

Gokongwie

Furthermore, according to Nicholls and Cho (2006), there are three main characteristics of social entrepreneurship are the following.

1. Sociality. This covers the environmental focus and can be noted in the creation of various public goods and positive externalities. Nicholls and Cho (2006) cited six fields or domains are natural settings for social entrepreneurship initiatives. It includes;

- (a) welfare and health services (such as the Aravind eye hospitals in India);
- (b) education and training (such as the Committee to Democratize Information Technology in Brazil);
- (c) economic development (such as work integration social enterprises, or WISEs, in Europe);
- (d) disaster relief and international aid (such as Keystone's innovative "Farmer Voice" project);
- (e) social justice and political change (including race and gender empowerment, such as SEWA, the Self-Employed Women's Association in Pakistan);
- (f) and environmental planning and management (such as the Marine Stewardship Council).

Moreover, this sociality can also lie in the organizational process of the social enterprise. Innovative solutions injected by the social entrepreneurs can also be seen in their human resource practices (ex: employing differently-abled citizens, gender empowerment), supply chain management, energy usage and recycling and access to credit and financial services (Ex. Microfinance for fisher folks). Moreover, sociality can also be evident in the sought outcomes of the enterprise. Organizations could be focused on social and environmental impact rather than the monetary returns.

Furthermore, according to Nicholls and Cho (2006), there are three main characteristics of social entrepreneurship are the following.

2. Innovation. Innovation in various levels and aspects of the organization is seen as a true mark of social entrepreneurship. These initiatives help in achieving the vision and mission of an enterprise and are sometimes incremental changes at the micro-level or via disruptive interventions at the systems level.

Furthermore, according to Nicholls and Cho (2006), there are three main characteristics of social entrepreneurship are the following.

3. Market Orientation. Social entrepreneurship in for-profit social enterprise form operating in various commercial markets are the usually most concerned when it comes to market orientation.
 - There is a great need to be mindful of earnings, the workforce and the target market.
 - A clear focus on continual improvements on performance by developing various metrics, increasing accountability and a sharp focus on vision and mission are the features that can help in extending the market orientation of a social enterprise.

Market orientation is a strategic focus on identifying consumer needs and desires in order to define new products to be developed. Established businesses like Amazon and Coca-Cola use market orientation principles to improve or expand their products or services.

A societal marketing orientation combines the customer-oriented approach of the marketing-oriented philosophy with a desire to improve society. Businesses with this philosophy conduct market research to develop specific products or services that meet customer needs, as well as improve society

Three Types of Social Entrepreneurship

Fowler (2000) suggested three types of social entrepreneurship. He mentioned that this includes the following;

1. Integrated. This is when the economic activity of the enterprise is producing social outcomes.

An integrated social enterprise is a business that combines social programs with business activities to support a nonprofit's mission and operations. Integrated social enterprises can:

Expand the organization's mission: By selling social services to a new market or providing new services to existing clients

Share costs and assets: With the nonprofit organization

Leverage assets: Such as expertise, program methodology, relationships, brand, and infrastructure

Example : Grameen Bank in Bangladesh provides small loan to women without collateral

2. Reinterpreted. This is when the currently existing not-for-profit is gaining and enjoying an increased income

Non-profit social entrepreneurs are usually companies and organizations that choose to use their power for social good. The story of Goodwill Industries serves as a great example: In 1902, the company started employing poor residents to work with donated goods, reinvesting all profits into job training programs.

3. Complementary. This is when the commercial revenues of the enterprise can cross-subsidize the social mission of another not-for-profit organization.

Jollibee . Tony tan Caktiong

Cecilio Kwok Pedro (Lamoiyan Corporation)

Three Social Enterprise Models according to Alter (2006)

1. Embedded. This is when the social programs are inherent in the business activities.
 - An example to this is Fair Trade. Fair Trade is a trading partnership that is anchored on dialogues, demanding transparency and promoting respect in order to seek higher equity in international trade.
 - This is part of the sustainable development concept as this offers better trading conditions by securing the rights of marginalized producers and workers.
 - These organizations are backed by consumers which are actively engaged in increasing awareness and in campaigning for improvements in rules and practices in various international trades.

Three Social Enterprise Models according to Alter (2006)

- 2. Integrated. This is when the social programs of the enterprise is overlapping with their business activities.
- An example to this is the Scojo Foundation in India. Scojo Foundation is offering an innovative microfinance programs by using market solutions that allow them to distribute cheap corrective glasses in the developing world.
 - With their efforts, corrective and reading glasses can be easily found in local pharmacies in order to give access to the world's poorest people.
 - As an example, those who suffer from Presbyopia can now go back to creating handicrafts, read newspapers, do tailoring and many others. These allowed thousands of farmers, craftspeople and merchants to resume working again.
-

Three Social Enterprise Models according to Alter (2006)

- 3. External. This is when business activities are considered as the external source of funding for several social programs that includes health or education.

10 Filipino Social Enterprises That Will Amaze You by Pauline Lacanilao

Bambike

Contact: 525-8289

bambike.com

This hip socio-ecological enterprise hires people in need to build bikes made from locally-sourced bamboo. When you buy a Bambike, you not only support the cause, but you also walk (or ride) away with a sturdy vehicle that doubles as a work of art. But if you don't want to commit to buying a bike, you can still ride one at the Bambike Intramuros Ecotour.

Bambike's bamboo bike builders (called "Bambuilders") come from Gawad Kalinga communities.

Messy Bessy

Contact: 502-7176

messybessy.com

www.facebook.com/messybessycleaners

Messy Bessy promises “all-natural, worry-free” cleaning products for your home, office, linens, body, and even your baby. When you support this company, you do two things at once: Messy Bessy keeps harmful chemicals out of your life, and also provides employment for young adults who have survived abuse, trafficking, and poverty.

Messy Bessy's campaigns are called HOUSE (Helping Ourselves Through Sustainable Enterprises) and HOP (Helping Ourselves Program).

Plush and Play

Contact: 0916-225-3363

plushandplay.com

www.facebook.com/PlushAndPlay

This up-and-coming toy manufacturer aims to set new standards in the local toy industry by focusing on safety, social, and environmental impact. They provide jobs and help underprivileged women develop skills, and are passionate advocates for children's rights. Most importantly, their safe yet adorable toys are kid-approved.

Meet Buko Martin. Other toys are named Fili Pinya and Manny Pakwan.

ANTHILL Fabric Gallery

Contact: (032) 505-4175

www.facebook.com/AnthillFabricGallery

ANTHILL is an acronym that stands for Alternative Nest and Trading Hub for Ingenious Little Livelihood Seekers. This social enterprise promotes Filipino culture and tradition through high-end indigenous textiles. Their unique fabrics support sustainable employment in rural communities.

Local weaves are made into scarves, skirts, bags and more with vibrant prints and colors.

Taclob

Online transactions and bazaars only

taclob.com

www.facebook.com/taclob.ph

This social-enterprise started as a response to the need for employment in the wake of typhoon Yolanda (Haiyan). The sleek, utilitarian backpacks are made from upcycled materials, and are produced by survivors of the typhoon. With each bag you purchase, a child affected by the typhoon will receive a floating backpack full of school supplies.

Upcycled "Compassion" backpacks are made by typhoon survivors.

Theo & Philo started out with just two variants: milk chocolate and 70% dark chocolate. Now they have 10

Theo & Philo

Contact: 631-1362

theoandphilo.com

www.facebook.com/TheoAndPhilo

Using cacao from Davao and sugar from Bacolod, Theo and Philo proudly sources their ingredients from local farmers, thus positively impacting rural Filipino communities. And instead of opening a huge factory full of machines, the social enterprise consciously chooses to hire people to handcraft chocolate bars in a “micro” factory setting. Their commitment to quality is undeniable, and it is apparent in every bite.

Bayani Brew

bayanibrew@gmail.com

bayanibrew.com

It's no surprise that Filipinos love iced tea. But this all-Filipino, all-natural tea brewery sets itself apart from its competitors with its philosophy and practices. Not only does it employ the nanays of a Bulacan community in order to promote sustainable living, it also promotes native ingredients such as lemongrass and pandan in order to celebrate being "crazy in love with our country." You can grab a brew at various resellers nationwide.

Bayani Brew teas use indigenous ingredients like lemongrass, pandan, and sweet potato tops.

Kawil Tours

kawiltours@gmail.com

kawiltours.com/kawil/

Go on vacation in a tropical paradise, and help bring life to a sleepy island and its locals. Kawil Tours is a social enterprise that aims to connect the world to Culion, a former leper colony, through a “meaningful journey” that involves historical walks, beach outings, and acts of environmental “voluntourism” such as planting mangroves. The folks at Kawil caution their guests about the island’s lack of parties and entertainment, emphasizing instead, the opportunity to fully commune with nature.

Culion is two hours south of Coron. The town is dominated by La Inmaculada Concepcion Church, which makes for fantastic travel photos.

The Paper Project

paperprojectph.com

The Paper Project provides employment for Filipino women escaping from prostitution. The women create environmentally sound, locally sourced paper handicrafts such as greeting cards, and sell them for a profit internationally. In addition to providing the women with employment, The Paper Project provides them with guidance in self-esteem, stress management, finances, and self-defense.

Every card created by The Paper Project is handmade.

Looking for a way to share your music with friends while on the beach? This would be the perfect way to do it.

Loudbasstard

koh.onozawa@gmail.com

loudbasstard.com

www.facebook.com/loudbasstardtm

Handmade by a community of artisans in Cebu using local bamboo and rattan, Loudbasstard produces chic, electricity-free sound amplifiers. Each piece is hand-cut, hand-sanded, hand-dyed, and hand-packaged—ensuring craftsmanship and quality for every customer. Additionally, this social enterprise provides instruments for musically gifted children from indigent communities.

QUESTIONS

